Suppose that "If I walk to work, then I cook the fish." and "I walk to work." are true. What is the conclusion?

There is no conclusion that can be drawn from these premises as there is no information about whether or not the person cooked fish. The only information provided is that if they walk to work, they cook fish, and they do walk to work.